3. He was careful to point out that these feelings were strictly his own and that the Baker Panel and subsequently the Killian Committee might not agree. Before leaving, he said that if he were successful in persuading the Baker Panel to share his view, the Agency could expect a return visit by him or other members at which time he wished to explore both the R&D and operational aspects of the problem.

4. In view of the attention paid to recommendations of the President's Board, it is strongly recommended that either you or Mr. Karamessines be present at such a meeting.
